

Spending adds up quietly.

A lightweight tracker should make the everyday money picture easier to see.

THE EVERYDAY GAP

“Where did my money go this month?”

Receipts, quick purchases, and small subscriptions blur together before anyone gets a clear answer.

$4.25 coffee

$18.40 lunch

$12.00 ride

WHAT PEOPLE NEED

■ Fast capture

Log a purchase while it is still fresh.

■ A simple answer

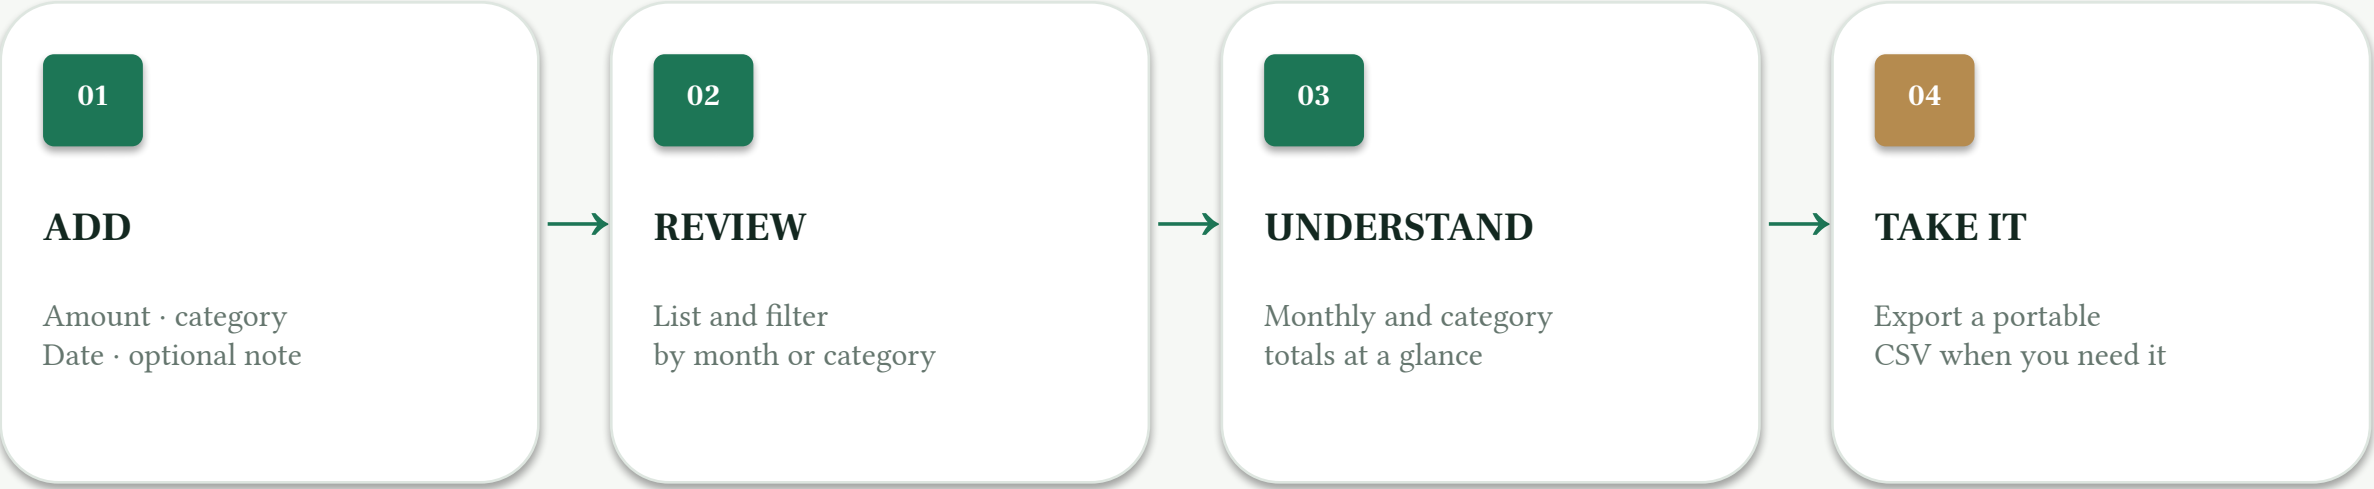

See totals by month and category.

■ Control

Keep a portable record without account linking.

From purchase to a clear record.

A short, deliberate loop: log it, review it, take the data with you.

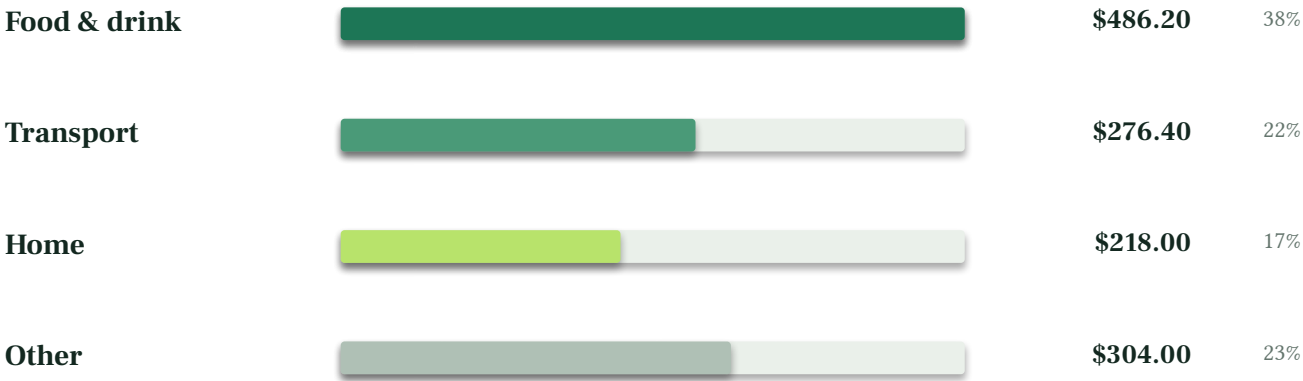

No bank connection required in this demo. Start with the expenses you choose to enter.

A small log can answer a useful question.

Illustrative month • sample figures only • not real customer data

SEPTEMBER SPEND

$1,284.60

THE TAKEAWAY

Food & drink is the largest category.

That is the kind of quick “where did it go?” answer BudgetSight makes easier to find.

FILTER → SUMMARIZE → NOTICE

Your record stays in your hands.

A transparent starting point: local storage and straightforward export.

DATA PATH

Your entries → local JSON file

This demo reads and writes the file you choose. It does not need a bank login to record expenses.

BUILT INTO THE DEMO

■ Local-first

Expense data is stored in a local JSON file.

■ Portable

Export records to CSV for your own use.

■ Clear boundaries

No cloud sync or security certification is claimed.

Grow from a reliable ledger.

A focused path that keeps clarity and user control at the center.

NOW

Make capture dependable

Fast entry, valid records, useful filters and summaries.

NEXT

Make patterns easier to spot

Recurring expense cues and clearer month-over-month views.

LATER

Add optional convenience

Explore import and backup choices with explicit user control.

Roadmap concepts are exploratory; they are not current product capabilities.

Start with one week of expenses.

Try the simple loop. Keep what works. Decide what you want to see next.

BUDGETSIGHT

See your spending with fresh eyes.

Capture a few purchases. Review the category totals. Export the record whenever you like.
